Genoa, June 20.

HIS Britannick Majesty's Ship the Dragon commanded by Captain Scot, arrived here the 13th Instant from Port Mahon, having been at Lisbon, Cadiz, and Gibraltar. It is reported here that the Spanish Squadron which sailed lately from Cadiz, is victualled for six Months. General Zumjungen designs to embark on board a Neapolitan Man of War here, in order to sail to Sicily. The Master of one of our Barks lately arrived from Palermo gives an Account, that he left a Tunis Corsair engaged with one of our Ships commanded by Captain Decotto, having 40 German Soldiers on board that embarked at Palermo to be transported to this Country. The Algerines are frequently seen with French Colours off the Spanish Coasts, and have several Times attempted to seize the Fisher Boats, but without Success. The Pope's Gallies have taken another Barbary Galliot.

Stockholm, June 24. Count Freytag gave in to the Chancery on the 22d Instant, his Remarks on the Council of War's Examination of his Affair with Major General Schwerin. M. Bestuchef the Czar's Minister, has presented a Memorial to the King, desiring that the Muscovites may trade to this Country on the same Foot as before the last War; that is, to have the Liberty of carrying their Goods directly from their Ships to their Storehouses, and to sell them in a Week's time, either by Wholesale or by Retail, which is not permitted to other Nations; but 'tis doubted if they will succeed in this Demand, seeing 'tis stipulated by the Neustadt Treaty, that the Subjects of the two Crowns shall be treated in respect to Commerce, as are the Subjects belonging to Nations the most favoured. Next Month will be sold publicly, several old Ships belonging to the Crown, that lie here and at Carelskron.

Copenhagen, June 30. 'It is again discoursed, that the King will soon return into Holstein. The Princess Sophia Hedwig begins to recover from her Illness. Count Freytag, the Imperial Minister, is daily expected to arrive here. The King has ordered a new Fort to be built between this City and the Island Amas, the better to defend this Capital towards the Sea.

Rendsbourg, July 2. The Post from Copenhagen arriving here Yesterday Morning, the Judges appointed to examine into Count Rantzau's Affair immediately assembled, and caused the Count to be brought before them; but he having excepted against them as his Judges, and refusing to make Answer in any wise to their Interrogatories, they desired him to reflect that in Quality of his Knighthood, as Privy-Counsellor and Chamberlain to the King of Denmark, 'twas expected he should submit to his Majesty's Jurisdiction. Upon which, 'tis said, the Count immediately took off his blue Ribbon, and the Gold Key, and laying them on the Table, said . . . "There lies the Knight, the Chamberlain, and Privy-Counsellor; I am yet a Count of the Empire." The Judges sent away an Express to Copenhagen with a Relation of these Particulars, and the Count was recommitted to his own House, where a Lieutenant and two inferior Officers are ordered to guard him Night and Day; Centinels are also placed at his Chamber Door; those who were before set at his House Door, out of Respect to his Character, are removed, as is also the Captain who accompanied him in his Chamber. Before the Judges dismissed him, they desired he would be ready to appear and make Answer before them as often as they should find necessary to send for him, and that upon the first Disobedience he should be fined 10000 Crowns, for the second 20000, and the third 30000: He is now allowed only one Footman to wait on him. The Committee have adjourned their next Meeting till they receive fresh Orders from Court.

Hambourg, July 3. Advices from Moscow say, that the Czar employs 100000 Men in the Expedition at the Caspian Sea; that the chief Admiral Count Apraxin, and General Butzerlin, are already arrived at Astracan, to get the Fleet and Troops in Readiness against the Czar's coming. The Ministers of Denmark and Holland, M. Westphale and M. Wilde, are permitted to accompany the Czar throughout the Expedition. Letters from Mecklenbourg say, that all the Duke's Officers are summoned to appear before the Imperial Commissioners, to take an Oath of Fidelity, while the Duke and his Nobility continue at Variance; and that such of them as shall not make their personal Appearance before the Commissioners, are to be broke. Letters from Moscow of the 29th of May say, that the Duke of Holstein, and all the Foreign Ministers, waited on the Czar the Day before his Departure for Astracan, to wish him a good Journey, and that in the Evening, the Czar visited the Duke of Holstein, and told him, he would do well to continue at Moscow till the Czar return'd; that in the mean time, he might establish himself in the good Opinion of the Second Princess. But the Duke being afterwards inform'd, that the Czar had given private Orders to both the Princesses to return to Petersbourg immediately after his Departure, his Highness became greatly concern'd, not knowing upon what to depend, and has therefore resolved to return with all his Attendance to Petersbourg, where in all Likelihood he will not continue very long. These Letters add, that a Courier is arrived from Isphahan, the Capital of Persia, with News, that the Czar's Consul there is extraordinarily caref'd, and that Orders are made to make the Czar entire Compensation for whatever the Rebel Persians have taken or destroy'd belonging to the Russian Merchants.

Hague, July 10. Count Staremberg and the Countess his Spouse are daily expected to arrive here, in order to embark for Great Britain, where the Count is appointed to reside in Quality of • Ambassadors Extraordinary from the Emperor.

• The States of Holland continue assembled, and
• having consulted their Cities upon the Receiver-
• General's Affair, they seem inclinable it should
• be sent back to the Council of State, but are not
• yet come to a perfect Resolution whether it shall
• or not.

Admiralty Office July 3, 1722.

Captain Barlow, Commander of the Royal African Company's Ship called the Whydah Frigate, being just arrived in the River of Thames, sailed from Barbadoes the 11th of May last, and the Day before came to that Island the Jason, commanded by Captain Plummer of Bristol, who gave him the following Account, viz. That His Majesty's Ship the Swallow, commanded by Captain Ogle, arrived at Cape Coast-Castle the Day on which he (Captain Plummer) sailed from thence, having on board him the Prisoners taken in the three Pirate Ships; that he (Captain Plummer) was on board the Swallow, saw the said Prisoners, and there received the following Account of the whole Transaction.

The three Pirate Ships being all at Cape Lopez, and two of them upon the Carcen, sent the third, a French Ship of 36 Guns out on a Cruise, which seeing Captain Ogle plying to Windward, took him for a Whydah Ship, and gave him Chase, Captain Ogle made from him for some Time, till he saw a proper Opportunity, then tacked and poured in a Broadside. After the the Pirate had fired a few stragling Guns, she struck, and Captain Ogle having Possession of her, made for Cape Lopez, having hoisted the Black Flag on board the Pirate, the Swallow following, and coming up with the two Ships on Carcen, fired a Broadside from the Pirate Ship, and another from the Man of War, by which Roberts was killed, and a great Number of their Men, who were overjoyed, as if a Prize had been brought in. The Man of War carried the said Three Pirate Ships to St. Thomas's, there left the Ships and made for Cape Coast-Castle, where she arrived some Day the beginning of March (which particular Day Captain Barlow does not remember) with the Prisoners in Number one Hundred and Seventy, several having made their Escape on Shore.
